George Willard Bush was born July 16, 1876 in Jackson Township, Will County. He was the son of the late Eli and Melissa Burson Bush, pioneer settlers of Will County.

He is also survived by his wife, five grand children, one great grand child, two brothers, William Lee Bush of Joliet and Roy Bush of Bay City, Mich., one sister Mrs. Louis McAllister of Elwood and a host of friends.

SEE SOLDIER SON IN MOVIE TAKEN IN NEW GUINEA

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Peterson of New Lenox recently received a letter from their son Frank who is with the United States Armed Forces somewhere in New Guinea saying that a moving picture had been taken of his outfit and that he was in the movie and that his folks should be on the lookout for it. Upon inquiry in the Joliet theatres it was learned that a movie entitled "The Yanks and the Aussies Clean Up Buna" had been shown there recently but had since been shown in Chicago. Upon further inquiry it was discovered RKO had the movie in Chicago and were kind enough to consent to send the picture back to Joliet for a re-show and last Saturday night at the close of the regular show at the Orpheum Theatre in Joliet, the movie mentioned was shown to a private theatre party of 25 relatives and friends of Mr. Peterson. They were thrilled and delighted to see him in the movie. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson deeply appreciate the very fine spirit of RKO and the Orpheum. The couple have two other sons in the service, one in North Africa and one in camp in Florida.

Vincent Billek, Homer Shoots Timber Wolf

While Vincent Billek of Homer Township was engaged in plowing his field with a tractor late Thursday afternoon, he was surprised when he saw what at first appeared to him to be a big police dog sitting in the field. He stopped his tractor, then adding more to his surprise was the discovery that the supposed "dog" was really a wolf. The latter was unafraid and started walking toward the tractor. Mr. Billek did not feel like taking a chance to see what was going to happen next, but instead started up his tractor and hurried home.

He got out his 12 gauge shot gun and walked back to the field. He soon spied the wolf prowling about and took a shot at it from behind a clump of bushes with the idea of getting the animal out in the open where he could get a good aim at it and in which he was successful. The second shot dropped the wolf.

The wolf was a female, weighed over 50 pounds and measured 52 inches from the tip of the nose to the tip of the tail. The legs from the body to the toes were 17 inches long. The animal appeared to be quite old and was of the timber wolf species.

Mr. Billek said he had noticed rabbit skins and a lot of pheasant feathers scattered about the field and thought some marauding animal must be in the vicinity. About two years ago a similar wolf was shot in the same neighborhood. The county pays $3 bounty for wolves and the hunters can sell the pelt, so a wolf is worth a few dollars at that.

Mr. Billek's farm is south of Oswald's grove in Homer Twp.

NEWSPAPER SUPPORT PUTS 2nd WAR LOAN CAMPAIGN OVER BIG

The following letter has been received by the editors through this section of the state from C. S. Young, Chairman of the United States Treasury War Finance Committee of the Chicago division showing what a fine part the newspapers played in making the Second War Loan Campaign successful.

"Much credit for making the 2nd War Loan Campaign a success belongs to the newspapers. The national goal was 13 billion dollars, but this greatest of war financing drives put over 18 billion dollars into the Treasury.

The outstanding support given the drive by newspapers, was, unquestionably, one of the principal factors in making it a memorable success. The newspapers in the Seventh Federal Reserve District were second to none in their understanding and co-operation, and I want to thank you sincerely for your unselfish generosity.

C. S. Young, Chairman."

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP PRESENTS A PLAY

The Frankfort Methodist church was filled to capacity Sunday when members of the Youth Fellowship presented a play entitled The Pill Bottle. Miss Betty Mark played the leading role in which a college girl gave up her career to become a medical missionary after seeing the need of her services while visiting her parents in India. She was looked upon by the natives as The God of the Pill Bottle. Elaborate costumes and excellent acting made the play a success. Plans to repeat the performance are being considered. Mrs. Mina Malek directed the cast composed of the following: Wilma Mark, Harriet Baade, Lois and Robert Knater, Loretta Reimers, Betty Vernon, Dorothy and Lorraine Bettenhausen, Joy Jones, Dorothy Mager, Donna McLean, Joyce Swatek, Violet Begeska, Lois Weitendorf, Robt. MOBILE UNIT COMING TO TINLEY JUNE 8-9

Residents of Frankfort, Mokena, Lincoln Estates, Orland Park, Oak Forest, Midlothian and Tinley Park are invited by E. B. Campbell, Chairman of blood donors for the Tinley Park unit to take part in this great work by donating a pint of their blood. The Mobile Blood Unit will visit the Tinley Park Public School June 8th and 9th to receive the blood donations.

Donors of blood must be between the ages of 21 and 60 and in good health. Those between 18 and 21 may donate their blood, provided they have their parents or guardians consent. From 35 to 40 minutes is all that is necessary to complete the blood-giving and the required rest period.

Anyone in this section who can and will donate their blood, please contact the following chairmen within this next week, stating the day and the approximate convenient time they can appear, so that the Red Cross can make their schedule, and they in turn will notify you of your appointment:

Rev. Rudolph Malek, Frankfort; Mrs. John Jones, Lincoln Estates; Mrs. S. S. Knox, Orland Park; Mrs. J. Vojtech, Oak Forest; Mrs. W. Musick, Midlothian; Mrs. Frank Baldwin, Tinley Park.

This project is not to be confused as a purely Tinley affair, as it is not, but is a community proposition. As about 400 people will be called upon to make blood donations all the surrounding towns have been included in the call in order to get the needed blood supply.

As the army and navy have asked for four million pints of blood to be processed into plasma, and the American Red Cross has been designated as the official collection agency, it takes a large number of donors to put this program over.

If you wish to make a blood donation contact the chairman nearest to you and arrangements will be made to receive your donation.

TINLEY PARK SCHOOL TO HOLD MUSIC FESTIVAL MAY 21

The second annual Tinley Park School Music Festival will be held at the school on the evening of May 21 at 8 o'clock. This year, due to the transportation difficulties the festival will be carried by the Tinley Park school alone. At the First Festival two other schools also took part in the program.

The program this year is based upon the very fine Ballad for Americans. From this folk songs and dances of the United Nations will be presented. Tuneful songs and colorful dances will enliven the setting decorated in the colors of the United Nations. The Ballad for Americans will be sung by the chorus and soloists as the grand finale is reached.

The story of the countries represented will be told in dramatic fashion by the children in introducing each song and dance.

The program is to be another out door festival of Spring and Parents and the whole community and surrounding communities are invited to attend. The program is under the direction of the faculty program committee. Costumes have been planned for the occasion and it promises to be especially colorful this year. This is another bit of evidence of the fine type of work being done in the Tinley Park School by the boys and girls of the Community.

Wing Talk

By Robert McCormick

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

One day, Major General James Chaney, commander of the First Air force at Mitchel Field, New York, was flying comfortably at 10,000 feet in a twin-engine bomber. The general was looking down distastefully at the 30-foot waves, when he thought he saw two impudent little yellow-winged planes sitting on the water beneath him. He made his pilot circle and came down to investigate. He discovered that the planes weren't actually on the water. They were low over it, looking for submarines. They were units of the Civil Air patrol.

"How far is it to land?" the horrified general asked the pilot.

"Seventy-one miles the shortest way," the pilot said.

Chaney wrote Maj. Earle Johnson, national commander of the CAP. "I just wanted you to know," he said, "that you have no draft dodgers in that bunch."

Incidentally, CAP men are not deferred from the draft. Most of them have dependents or are overage or physically unfit for regular military duty.

CAP Part of OCD.

The CAP was started a week before Pearl Harbor as part of the Office of Civilian Defense. Plans were worked over for a month before that, by a committee of air-conscious people who refused to be skeptical. The main idea was to use the thousands of private pilots, planes and air enthusiasts, in work which could be done by men and equipment somewhat less high-powered than that used by the army air force.

Since then, the CAP has flown more than 14 million miles—top average is 87,000 miles a month.

A wing was set up in each state, under a wing commander.

The boys and girls (several CAP groups are all women) meet three nights a week, usually, and study navigation, radio, meteorology, military drill and military courtesy. Those who bring their own planes get paid around $15 an hour, depending upon its horsepower, when it's actually in the air. But only the depreciation on the plane goes to the owner; the rest goes into a kitty from which all owners buy parts, tools and similar essentials, when they can get what they need.

Volunteers Must Go Anywhere.

There are 21 CAP bases from Mexico to Maine, and a volunteer is just as likely as not to find himself sent for 30 days to a forsaken hole miles from the nearest civilization, where he has to live by his wits and courage.

One southern base, more than a hundred miles from the nearest hospital, has among its active workers a well-known doctor, who serves one month each year instead of taking a vacation. Out over the ocean one day, he was notified by radio that another man at the base was sick.

The doc tore back to find a young mechanic with a ruptured appendix. A workshop bench was made into an operating table, and with the few unspecialized surgeon's tools at hand, the doctor went to work. The young man is doing nicely today at the same old stand, and the doctor is still placidly flying the submarine patrol on his time off.

When the CAP first got the idea that its little put-puts could be death on subs, all even faintly orthodox military minds were properly skeptical. Finally Major Johnson, who throws off enthusiasm for the project in all directions, wangled $18,000 for a 30-day trial at a base near one of the worst ship graveyards on the East coast. The usual complement of a base commander and 76 men took over, with their customary collection of odds and ends for equipment, and went to sea in the aerial equivalent of pea-green boats.

Within ten days, General Bradley of the army air force came up to inspect the base. Ten days is scarcely time to set a new apartment in order, but he found the little airplanes buzzing over the ocean with such effectiveness that sinkings had dropped off 85 per cent.

Yet the planes carried no bombs, and could only radio the army or navy for help when they found a sub. Another base was set up, and another and another, and at each one, the sinkings went down.

One day two CAP planes found a sub. They badgered it until it rammed into a mudbank, but they didn't have as much as a rock to drop. No help came and the sub got away. When Gen. Hap Arnold, chief of the air force, heard of the incident, he blew up. The patrol planes would carry bombs, he said.

AIR PRISONERS IN GERMANY

The fate of American fliers in the Doolittle raid has raised the question: What happens to airmen who go down over Europe? Here is the answer from an officer of the U. S. bomber command in England.

If fliers bail out and get down safely over France, Belgium or occupied Europe, their chances of getting back to England are pretty good. They become prisoners of war, but in the course of exchanging prisoners, they may soon get back to base.

If they bail out over Germany, there's not much chance of getting back. But so far as we know, the treatment of air prisoners is similar to that of other prisoners, and varies according to rank.

There is one incident, however, that damns the German record—the story of Paddy Finucane. Most people suppose that the famous RAF ace lost his life because his Spitfire crashed into the channel after being hit over France.

The truth is—though this has never been published—that as Finucane was falling, he was strafed by German machine gunfire, and he was already dead when he hit the water. Thus a new meaning comes to Finucane's famous phrase, "This is it, chaps."

TOUGH JOB

When you sift down all the hullabaloo about Elmer Davis and his Office of War Information, the only valid criticism you can make against the drawing Hoosier is that he is working too hard. The last two weeks when he went on the air, he was so exhausted he had a stand-by alongside ready to take up his script if he collapsed.

Davis works far into the night, tries to read all that his voluminous office produces, sees almost everyone who wants to see him.

But given a tough situation, basically he has done a good job. Senators like Montana's Wheeler and Nevada's McCarran, whose acid digestive systems are always poisoning their political outlook, make a wry face at Davis. But Wheeler and McCarran are always demanding more facts and inside fact is that Davis has been fighting their battle in keeping the American public informed.

Most of Davis' fight is getting news, squeezing it out of government bureaus which don't want to give, making the army and navy release facts which show up their mistakes, rowing with Czarubber Jeffers because his estimates on tires are too rosy.

When Davis stepped down from his well-paying radio job to correlate government information, everyone envied him his job, thought he had a softie. But the job of digging news, accurate news, unpleasant news out of the government is not soft. And it is not popular.

Davis is a good newsman. Being such, he is not popular, never will be in some quarters.

Note: Davis did his best to release the story on bombing Tokyo long ago. Several times he urged the White House that the American public should know the facts. Earlier, when the Japs released a picture of U. S. fliers supposedly captured in the Tokyo raid, Davis wanted to point out the truth, namely that these were naval fliers, not Doolittle's. They had been captured in a naval battle. This explanation was broadcast to foreign countries by OWI, but Davis, through no fault of his, was not permitted to tell folks at home.

FDR'S CONGRESSMAN

As commander-in-chief, the President has supreme powers in the conduct of the war, but he is just another citizen on the books of the Hyde Park, N. Y., rationing board.

At a recent White House meeting, the President was telling three congressmen, Gale, Republican, of Minnesota, Jackson, Democrat, of Washington, and Manasco, Democrat, of Alabama, about the "red tape" involved in buying meat and groceries on his trips home to Hyde Park.

"I have my problems with point rationing the same as you fellows," he grinned.

"Why don't you write your congressman?" suggested Republican Representative Gale.

The President reflected briefly, then threw up his hands and roared with laughter.

"Oh, no," he exclaimed, "not that!"

The man who represents the Hyde Park district in congress is Hamilton Fish, one of the most vitriolic, vituperative foes the President has in congress.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

A high ranking army officer, just back from a U. S. tour, makes this observation: "High morale may be lowered by too much talk of post-war planning, which makes the boys think the show is almost over."

If the Japs were still in their Washington embassy, they could set their clocks by lanky Will Clayton, astute deputy to Jesse Jones, who walks three miles to work every morning. He passes the defunct Jap embassy precisely at eight.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ALTHOUGH the new wartime baseball has been endowed officially with quite lively qualities, those comparatively few outstanding batsmen remaining in the game are prone to argue the point.

Rubber has given way to balata compound in the composition of today's ball. Experts say it lacks the jackrabbit tendencies which enabled clubs to pile up topheavy home run records.

A Detroit scribe questioned the fliers after a recent game with the Pirates. And, he declared, "you can take the word of the Tigers for it, the ball that will be used in the American league this season is dead—more than a fossil fish."

Roger Cramer, veteran Tiger outfielder, summarized the situation thus: "When I hit that ball I thought I had whacked a hollow stump. Although I didn't know that the ball had been changed. I was suspicious. (Manager Steve O'Neill hadn't told the boys that the 1943 ball was being used.) I naturally concluded that somebody had deadened the balls by putting them in the ice box. You know, some teams used to do that with the old ball once in a while, when they thought a dead ball might do them some good. But when Steve told us we had been using new balls, I knew that we would be blasting no rabbits this season."

Nothing New
The balata model stirs the memories of old timers who were familiar with the dead ball. In 1913, J. Franklin Baker, infielder with the Philadelphia Athletics, earned the name "Home Run" Baker by clouting the terrific total of 11 home runs. That same year the eight teams of the American league hit 158 home runs. Philadelphia led with 33, New York trailed with eight. In 1942, the American league home run total was 533. The National total was 538. The Yankees had the leadership in the American league with 108. The Giants topped theirs with 109.

The fast ball didn't make its appearance until 1919. In 1920, Babe Ruth went to New York and started with his big bat to establish a myriad of records. In 22 years played in the majors he compiled a total of 714 home runs, hitting 40 or more in 11 different years and establishing a record of 60 round trips in 1927. His lifetime major league batting average was .341.

Contrast that with "Home Run" Baker's record. How much the lively ball can help batters is apparent by the increase in hitting noted previously, the mounting home run and extra base hit totals and the ever-growing .300 division.

Sisler's Record
The career of one man is worth considering when weighing the merits of the rabbit ball against those of the lively ball. George Sisler is the individual in question. One of the greatest players of all time, his career lasted eight years, until eye trouble stopped him. He batted against the dead ball for five years and against the lively one in his last three years.

Against the dead ball, Sisler's five-year average was .330. His highest season batting average was .353 and his largest total of hits was 190. Against the lively ball he had a three-year average of .399. His largest number of hits was 257 and his best batting average was .420.

Ty Cobb, Harry Heilmann and others who were up against both types of ball said that the lively ball traveled 50 to 60 feet farther than the dead one.

But—one thing must be kept in mind. The public likes plenty of hitting. John Q. Fan prefers home runs to stolen bases. Proof of that lies in the fact that American league attendance increased more than one million in 1937, one of the heaviest hitting seasons. The number of hits is often reflected in the box office.

SPORTS SHORTS
The oldest horse known to science is an 11-inch fossil dug up 40 years ago in Wyoming and now in Amherst's museum. It is said to be about 45 million years old.

Of the 33 players on the Washington Redskins' football squad last year, 23 were married men.

Jimmy Foxx is said to draw $8,000 a year as an oil and leather salesman.

Eddie Levy, Phil first baseman, wears a No. 9 shoe on one foot and a 9½ on the other.

WHICH brand of baseball would you rather see? The Ty Cobb scientific type or the Babe Ruth power stuff? Which makes the more interesting ball game—1 to 0, or 9 to 8?

For the first time in over 20 years the fan colony may have its chance to look at much lower scoring. No other season ever opened with a clean spread of shutouts, such as the 1943 balata special, presented to Grantland Rice chilly customers.

The once noisy blast of the home run has given way to the widely-scattered plunk of the single or double, and the odds now are that any man who can hammer out 20 home runs this season will lead his league.

Unless more rabbit meat is fed the present ball, we may even get back to the day when Home Run Baker earned his title and led both leagues with the magnificent total of 11 home runs.

The Ty Cobb Brand

Ty Cobb has told me more than once that his interest in baseball lagged when Babe Ruth began taking his home-run swing.

"That," said Ty, "meant the finish of base running, of scientific baseball where you had to work for a run at a time."

"We had to work our heads off to get a run. A run was important. After the arrival of Babe Ruth and the rabbit ball, not even five runs were important in many of the games."

I can take you back to Ty Cobb and the campaign of 1911, to slip you an idea of what Ty Cobb baseball meant.

In 1911, Cobb made 248 base hits, scored 147 runs and stole 83 bases.

In the records of those days his home run mark, extremely low, was not even mentioned. It was a matter of hits, runs and stolen bases.

In 1915, Cobb scored 144 runs and stole 98 bases. His combination of speed and smartness along the towpaths was one of baseball's greatest features, where home runs seldom figured in any game.

Ty Cobb
where home runs seldom figured in any game.

The Babe Ruth Brand
Babe Ruth came along as a home run hitter in 1919. As a left-handed pitcher he had set a new winning percentage, even above Johnson, Mathewson and Alexander. Now he was on the offensive side.

In Babe's tremendous wake the scientific side of baseball gave way to raw power. Base-running and sacrificing became unimportant factors.

Raw power was combined with a far livelier ball, a ball that piled up trouble for pitchers and infielders. The records show all this.

Ruth was on his way to over 700 home runs. "And the point is," Cobb told me, "the Babe's great success swept both leagues. They were now all trying to be home-run hitters. They were all, or nearly all, taking the big cut at every pitch near the plate."

It would be interesting to know what might have happened to baseball if Ruth hadn't arrived just at that time.

The Bambino undoubtedly changed the game. Hands that once choked the bat after the manner of Keeler and Cobb, now moved back to the end of the knob.

Stronger Defense

The games of Cobb and Ruth were entirely different in many ways. The same thing happened to polo and golf, where power became more important than control.

Both Cobb and Ruth have their supporters. The old-timers are almost solidly for the Cobb game. The moderns are for Ruth.

The main point is that after over 20 years of power baseball, the crowds now face a stronger defensive game, where a single run might be important.

This means a greater premium on speed, pitching and defensive play.

If it doesn't work out there is sure to be a quick change to the livelier ball—where once again the home run will supplant the single, the sacrifice and the steal.

Season's Length

This is about what a majority think about the length of the current baseball campaign—

"Most of the ballplayers now left have either been deferred on physical grounds or have wives and children. These children are all young, many of them between the ages of two and six. It has been announced more than once that the supporting heads of such families will be the last ones drawn into service. Many of these might be called by midsummer, but hardly by Labor day."

IT'S true, not every little girl can boast a bolero dress of her own! This one is something very special with its heart-shaped neck, huge pockets and bow-tied belt. The bolero itself might be worn with other dresses.

Pattern No. 8207c is in sizes 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 years. Size 4 bolero and dress take 2½ yards 35-inch material; 4 yards rick-rack.

Feelings Hurt
A harvest hand was caught in the thrasher belt and whirled around past Farmer Green several times before being tossed free.

"Quick!" cried Green, rushing up to his inert form. "Are you hurt? Speak to me, speak to me!"

"Why should I?" grunted the hand angrily. "I passed you a dozen times just now and you didn't speak to me."

Diminutive Senator Was Not Short on Repartee

The smallest member of the United States senate was Georgia's Alexander H. Stevens, later vice president of the Confederacy. He was less than five feet tall and weighed somewhat under 80 pounds.

One day an out-sized western congressman, stung into a fury by the barbed remarks of the little Georgian, shouted: "You! You! Why, I could swallow you and never know I'd eat a thing!"

Replied Senator Stevens: "In that case you'd have more brains in your belly than you ever had in your head."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Planes now transport rubber and supplies to South American rubber forests in hours. Until war placed rubber on the "have not" list in the U. S., weeks and months were consumed in carrying supplies to the rubber tappers.

When one considers that for more than 20 years car and truck owners were encouraged to abuse their tires, through various forms of road hazard guarantees, it must be acknowledged that a laudable patriotism is being shown by them now in conserving their rubber supplies.

Remember the days when 20 pounds pressure per cross section inch was the standard inflation recommendation? Rough riding and flats were the order of the day.

A new highway has been constructed to the Marcapata gold mines in Peru. But rubber is the most important item being carried over it.

MURDER at PIRATE'S HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT WNU RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $500 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. She finds, in an old chest, the body of a man identified as Roddy Lane. Lily Kendall is found dead, with Hugh Norcross' scarf around her neck. Judy accidentally brushes against the wet paint on a picture of the church just finished by one of the guests, Albion Potter. Under the picture of the church is a portrait of Lily Kendall's niece, Gloria Lovelace. Potter is revealed as a famous movie director, Albert Parker, whose wife ran away with Roddy Lane.

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER XIX

"Tell me," Victor said. "You killed Lane the night he came to the Head, didn't you? Rigor mortis must have set in, judging from the way Judy described that hand. How did you happen to leave him there?"

"I wanted the body. Had to have a body for Brown. Used all Mrs. Gerry had in her kerosene can and the gas from Lane's car. That was stupid of me, but I wanted a big fire, and De Witt's breaking the window of the garage made it easy. She burned like tinder, as you saw. Took off the ring and put it in Judy's bag."

"Hurry, man! It was you that Quincy and Judy saw running along the bluff last night?"

"No, that must have been Norcross," he said. "He'd gone the back way, through the woods, up the strip of beach and climbed to the church."

"But you took me to town!" Wylie objected.

"Be quiet!" commanded Victor. "Hurry, Potter. You drove to town three times, didn't you? Afternoon to the movies for the stub alibi. Again with Wylie and De Witt after supper, when you knew your chance had come because Lane had come to the Head. But you only stayed until dark. Then you came back, after phoning the milkman to co-operate for a reward. Told him it was a Fourth of July prank at the bridge."

"Right. He said the old bridge needed repairing and that was one way to get it done."

"So you left the time bomb, knowing you'd pick up Wylie Gerry, and the only other car out was the minister's?"

"De Witt had said he'd be back early. Wasn't much of a chance. Left my car in the woods, off the road near Gerry's barn. Luckily, I met no one on the Neck, and no one at the Head saw me. Kept my lights out. Then I made for the church, after reconnoitering a bit, through the basement door via my pass key. Miss Kendall was asleep on the church steps, worse luck, but I had to take a chance to get Lane out of the chest and into the shed."

"He was in the chest, then? Since the night before? While the auction was going on? Why?"

"Listen, will you? Can't you see the way this tub's filling? The night Lane came I was hidden in the church basement. I was disguised as Old Man Brown. I watched Lane digging where his treasure had been taken out by me. Then I came out of the shadows and told him who I was. 'Get up and fight like a man!' I cried. He was an awful coward. He fell at the first blow of my fists, then he pulled a gun. But I got it away from him and struck him with it. He went down and didn't get up again. I had a skeleton key that would unlock anything. I wanted to go get my little cart from the shack and drag Lane's body there, but I heard someone coming. That Kendall woman was always hanging around the church steps. So I opened the chest and dumped him in. He was quite dead. As evidence against Lane, the gun might come in handy, so I kept it. Later it seemed best to hurl it into the sea. I was afraid to fire it for fear of being heard by the person outside, and I wasn't sure it had been fired—to make it look like a murder weapon. Besides, I had to be sure the body wouldn't be recognizable before leaving the gun. Then poor Miss Kendall—" he broke off.

But Lily Kendall had seen it on the rocks near the Pirate's Mouth, just as Victor had; only Victor'd kept still about it, while Lily showed her suspicion.

"And she thought it was yours, Quade," Potter was saying. "She told me to get that revolver. She believed you'd killed Lane with it. She never had any fear of me, when I asked her to show me where. But when she leaned over, I struck her with a rock I had ready. She screamed once and my heart stood still. She didn't scream again. I had Norcross' blue scarf in my pocket, and you know what I did with it. Then I scrambled around the cliff, to the beach, to the woods, to my car in Gerry's barn. Heaven alone knows why none of you caught me, though the beach isn't visible from the inn. Same as the night before, after dragging Lane from the chest to the shed in the cart I'd bought for the purpose, which burned up in the shed. Then I put out the shed light and went through the woods to my car, drove to town and picked up Gerry. Saw De Witt's car and got him to help me persuade Gerry, who was tight, to come home. Strengthened my alibi. But Judy nearly caught me in the church basement. If she'd come out the rear door she'd have stumbled over my little wagon."

That squeaky door! I shuddered as Potter half-grinned at me. If I'd taken the cliff path!

"While you were pushing Quincy's chair out the front way, I was loading my burden onto the wagon. I knew it was now or never. I'd meant to go back the night before and finish the hiding of that body in the shed, but—well, maybe I got cold feet. The little cart was right behind you on the path—at a safe distance, of course. It was well greased; didn't rattle. I hid behind some bushes while you investigated the shack where the light was still on. The minute you passed, did I hustle! You'll find the thick glasses if you hunt in the brush."

"You'd cut the phone wires earlier?"

"Before going to town the first time—after supper, that is. And the boats were hacked the night Lane died, when I got the gas for his pyre. Norcross, your club I'd picked up where De Witt had left it. Used it as a blind to confuse the issue. Also your sister's coat. It was lying in the hammock all last night. I wore it part of the time, in case I should be seen running through the darkness. Sorry about the spot. I really tried to cleanse it."

"Get up and fight like a man!" I cried.

He gave the oars a shove into the sea. The police boat was within hail, and shouting at us. We didn't shout back. The drama unfolding before our eyes left us paralyzed. The water had crept up until it seemed as if Albion Potter must drown where he sat.

"Jump for it, man!" begged De Witt.

But Victor said not a word. The police boat was almost upon the Eleanor. Would it reach there in time? Just as I was wondering, she slipped into the sea.

The police launch came chugging up after it was all over. From then on confusion reigned at Pirate's Head. I think I answered a million questions, not that it did any good. But the town had to bury Roddy Lane!

Bessie Norcross, despite all that had happened, grew sentimental. She wanted to take charge of his funeral. Hugh wouldn't let her.

"Judy," he said to me, the night before they left, "she's headed for another breakdown right this minute. I'm taking her off on a cruise so she can't make a fool of herself here. When we get back—and this has all died down—there's something I want to ask you. Will you write me, dear?"

Poor Hugh! With that sister of his he'd never have a chance to ask a girl anything. It was the second time he'd called me dear. "I'll answer all your letters," I said.

Hugh's dark eyes held mine soberly. Then he leaned over and kissed my hand. We could both hear his sister calling:

"Oh, Hughie! Come close my trunk straps."

Victor Quade was standing in the doorway. Had he seen Hugh kissing my hand? Evidently he had, for as Norcross hurried away to his Lady Simon Legree, Victor said, "Parting is such sweet sorrow! Going to miss him? And me?"

It had come then. Victor was stepping out of my life. I couldn't conceal that I cared, and didn't try. "Of course I shall miss you—both. When people have been through all we have together—"

"Exactly. Judy, what'll you do with the old church?"

I shrugged. "Sell it if I can."

"Will you? That's what I hoped. I'll buy it. Grand place to write mystery stories. So full of—atmosphere. Do you know short-hand?"

My heart gave a great bound. "No, but I could learn."

"Bless you! You'll have to. But we'll try to get through this one straight to the machine. Type, can't you?"

"After a fashion. Why?"

"Because, now that the police have wound up this case, I want to get busy right away. You remember my title—'Murder on the Bluff'? Not bad, do you think?"

"Not good, either. Not distinctive enough. 'Murder at Pirate's Head' doesn't sound so—so much as if it had been used before."

Victor's hands gave a loud clap. "I knew it! You'll be invaluable to me. You will help me, won't you? Mrs. Gerry'll have to get a new hostess. We'll turn the church into a studio. Trailer always annoyed me; too much in it. A man likes to pace while he writes."

"I'd love to help you, Mr. Quade."

"Why Mister me now, after all we've been through, Judy? Vide, my friends call me—Vidor Quinn."

"You'll always be Victor to me," I said, and saw how pleased he looked.

"This case will write itself," he said, "all but one thing. What did Potter do with the gun—throw it into the sea the second time? Hardly think so. He seemed pretty nervous about those fingerprints I guessed at."

"Wait," I said, recalling the green bead near the hollow stump. The bead had been in the mixed string which had caught on Potter's button when we were going over the auction, and I remembered that he'd only run for the Eleanor after he'd started tearing down toward the willow. As the idea clicked I got Victor to hunt down the path. We searched thoroughly and found Lane's revolver hidden in the hollow stump. The little green bead must have clung to his coat by the broken strand and dropped when he bent to toss the gun from his pocket.

"That," Victor said, "fixes everything. Potter was afraid to hurl this into the sea lest he miss again or have someone see him."

"Everything except the fingerprint he left in my powder compact. I didn't see any."

"Naturally," and how his teeth gleamed as Victor grinned at me. "Bless you! There wasn't any."

PETER AND JOHN PREACH TO SAMARITANS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:14-25. GOLDEN TEXT—Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.—John 4:35.

The Church as it grows has problems, and so God calls leaders to serve Him in meeting and settling them for His glory and the good of the Church.

Philip had gone to Samaria (as a result of the first persecution of the Church) and there he had been used of God to bring many to faith in Christ. Now that the new groups of believers needed guidance and instruction, Peter and John were sent to help them (v. 14).

A proper understanding of, and attitude toward, God's gracious gift of salvation is of first importance. New converts must recognize that it is a gift: that it cannot be earned or bought, and that it issues in a life of service and testimony.

All three of these matters are covered in our lesson.

I. Spiritual Life and Power Is God's Gift to Believers (vv. 14-17).

The Holy Spirit was received by these early members of the Church by the laying on of the apostles' hands, but later He came directly into the believer's heart the moment he had faith in God. This is now our blessed privilege, and the provision for our every need as followers of Christ, to recognize the indwelling Holy Spirit.

What a glorious truth it is that the believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit, He who is a divine person, not just a power or influence (I Cor. 6:19). Thus every believer, including the humblest as well as the greatest, has in him the One who gives spiritual life and power, who gives grace for holy living, and empowers for service.

The greatest power in all the world—the power of the infinite God—is thus available to every true and yielded believer, as God's free gift.

Gone then is all boasting of our own strength, and gone are all excuses for weak and careless living. The power and grace are His, and He gives them to us as His gift. Christian friend, are you allowing the Holy Spirit who dwells in you, to infill and use you as He will?

II. Spiritual Life and Power Cannot Be Bought by Works or Money (vv. 18-24).

Men of this world are so used to putting their trust in money that they come to think that one can buy anything. To them every man and every desirable thing must have its price. Let us be clear that there are men who cannot be bought, and that the best things in life bear no price tag. A mother's love, friendship, fellowship with God—priceless they are, but not for sale.

Above all let it be clear that eternal life, and the power of God the Holy Spirit, cannot be gained by piling up good works, nor by payment in the coin of this world.

Simon Magus wanted this power to improve his business as a magician. He made a very gross proposal, but one wonders whether he was any more to be censured than many in the Church today who are doing the same thing, though by more cultured and skillful methods.

Not only are there those who are trying to buy their own way into heaven, but also those who by holding the purse strings, try to control the message of the preacher. What about those who by their financial gifts seek to gain control of church organizations?

Their efforts are doomed to ultimate failure—God will see to that!—but in the meantime they do much harm to the cause of Christ. Many a church and pastor would like to rise up and say with Peter, "Thy money perish with thee."

III. Spiritual Life and Power Should Result in Testimony (v. 25).

Peter and John set the Samaritan Christians a good example as they went back to Jerusalem, by permitting the Holy Spirit to use them to testify and to teach the Word of the Lord in many of their villages.

One of the great hindrances to the carrying out of the great commission has been that Christians have received spiritual life, and even spiritual power, as though it were something for their own gratification or comfort. God saves us to serve Him in testimony and in life.

The Holy Spirit does not speak of Himself. He guides the believer in all truth (John 16:13), particularly the truth regarding Christ. The Spirit's primary interest is to glorify Christ (John 16:14).

It follows then that the Spirit-filled believer will be busy about speaking for Christ and glorifying His name. The Holy Spirit is ready to teach even the words to say that Christ may be lifted up and men be saved.

Peter and John, as good leaders of these new Samaritan believers, gave them by word and example a good foundation for growth in grace and usefulness to Christ.

Youth Took Lesson to Heart With Feet Down!

"Charles," said the sharp-voiced woman to her husband on the train, "do you know you and I had a romance on a train?"

"Never heard of it," said Charles. "Don't you remember it was a pair of slippers I presented to you the Christmas before we were married that led to our marriage? You remember how nicely they fit, don't you? We were going to a picnic, you had your feet on a seat, and when you weren't looking I took your measure. But for that pair of slippers I don't believe we'd ever been married."

A young man sitting opposite with a girl, immediately removed his feet from the seat.

Dear Friends:

I received your Easter gift package. I sincerely appreciate the present and wish to thank each and every one of you.

I have not written a letter which would appear in the servicemen's column, for several months now the reason is purely neglect on my part. Although we are kept busy in automatic surlboard operator work.

I will be starting my eleventh month here at Crowder May 1. I am in my seventh and probably my last company here in this camp. The organization of the new unit training centers here have prompted many of my shifts. I am classified as automatic surlboard repairman. I was a telephone installer repairman before I came into this. I am both of the said mentioned. As far as I can learn, we are to be a so called Army of occupation.

That is we will take over the foes

Notice

Take notice that application for retail liquor license outside incorporated village or town in Cook County has been made by the following:

Ernest F. Willets and Genevieve M. Hannell, "Olympia Gardens" Lincoln Highway west of Western Avenue, Rich Township, Matteson, Illinois.

Objections to the granting of such license may be made to the President of the Board of Commissioners of Cook County, as local Liquor Control Commissioner in writing and signed by the objector within five days stating specifically the grounds of objection.

central office and repair the damage to the complicated surlboard. The Germans will make certain that there will be plenty of repairing to do on our part. They will probably wreck everything or all they possibly can before clearing out.

We may go out of the Co. as teams all depends on the War Department. During the past several months U. S. O. shows, and other entertainment units have come to Crowder often. I saw Cary Grant and Eddie Bracken among many other Hollywood stars in person. This warm Missouri weather is coming around. I hope it does not get as hot as it did last summer down here. Camp Crowder is located at the far southern tip of Missouri, a "skip and a jump" into Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. The railroad connection into these three bordering states are poor. Thus very few fellows attempt to spend a week end there. I have made three thirty mile trips with rifle, field pack, gas masks, and bedding. We spend from one to four nites out. We hike fifteen miles out and the same distance back. Carrying the load I mentioned is not the easiest job I could think of did I say easy—just ask other town fellows in the service.

I well I guess I'll sign off for now. Received many birthday and Easter cards and gifts.

Sincerely,
E. Nugent

There is not much news around here, just school and more schools. I expect to be thru here in about a month. So until I have some news for you will close now hoping every one of you have a Happy Easter and thanking you again I remain

Hi Friends:

Well, after chasing around the west coast for several months, I'm finally settled with a permanent squadron. I consider myself a very lucky G. I., for being attached to one of the best outfits in this neck of the woods.

However, that's getting away from the subject. I'd like to take this opportunity to thank you for the swell sweater which you so kindly sent a few weeks ago. I can certainly use it. Well I reckon that just about winds up my little letter. Thanks again.

Bright Ideas for Spring Cleaning

WITH spring in the air, your thoughts are probably turning to plans for cleaning and decorating. And in line with this we offer some timely suggestions that will help you get more light from your present lamps and fixtures, give your home new life and give the family extra eye comfort.

For example, by choosing wall and ceiling colors wisely you can get more light reflection in your rooms. By changing the lamp shade lining, cleaning up the bowls and bulbs, and properly placing your lamps, you can get as much as 50% more illumination. And this added light doesn't cost you a penny.

Read over the suggestions illustrated here and if you would like more detailed information on each of these points, come in and ask for your free copy of the specially-prepared booklet entitled "Wartime Ideas for Homemakers."

Clean lights are bright lights. Wash diffusing bowls with soap and water and wipe lamp bulbs with a damp cloth. Caution: Never wipe hot bulbs with a damp cloth. Never immerse bulbs in water and don't permit sockets to become wet.

Dust is a light-robber. Silk and fabric shades should be frequently and carefully brushed with a soft bristle brush. A damp cloth or wallpaper cleaner may be used to brighten up most parchment shades.

White lining means more light. You can lighten dark or discolored linings in parchment shades with a coat of light paint, first making sure that you consult booklet for details on painting. Reline fabric with white or light material.

Bring the lamp closer. Give your eyes a break. Floor, table and pin-up lamps should be placed so that the lower edge of the lamp shade is about 24 inches from the eye-work.

Exchange burned-out bulbs. When completely burned out or unusable, bulbs supplied under the Company's most generally used rates (which include lamp bulb service) may be exchanged for new bulbs without extra charge or at concessional charges, depending upon the size and type desired. Bulbs must be returned with glass intact. You may exchange your burned-out bulbs at any one of the following agencies:

Dear Mr. Semmler:

It has been sixteen months since I have left Frankfort. It is over a year that I have left the States. Always read your paper. Sure have missed it. But some day I hope to read it again. My Dad sends me the local news from it just about every week, so parts of your paper travels ten thousand miles. It sure doesn't seem that far from home.

It was a year ago yesterday that I arrived in Australia. During my stay in Australia I have travelled a good deal. The living conditions here are about the same as in the States. They have two different things which they hunt here. One is the Kangaroo, the other is the Wild Turkey. I have went hunting for the turkeys. Also had several good meals of turkey. The turkey weighs from 10 to 18 pounds.

The climate here is different than that from ours. It is just like summer here at all times. At present it is what is known as winter here now. The difference is it is the rainy season in the winter. It gets to 140 degrees or better out in the sun.

I have had the opportunity of being camped near several of the largest cities in Australia which I can't mention the names of. But the cities here are like those back home.

On our arrival in Australia the people sure tried to make us feel at home. We were invited to their homes for tea which is in our language dinner or supper.

I have left Australia and am now somewhere in New Guinea. It sure is a jungle. Have been eating coconuts and bananas which are grown wild. They sure are good. We have natives working in the camp area. We are 9 degrees from the equator. So it isn't very cool here. When it rains it just pours. But after a rain when the sun comes out and can shine through the jungle it soon dries up. There are a few large snakes. The largest I have seen was eight feet long and about as thick as a person's arm. They said it was a

Let Us Have Faith

Besides buying War Bonds and Stamps, we here at home have a duty to perform to keep faith with the boys at the front. To keep ourselves financially strong so there'll be jobs and homes for them to come back to—and the kind of a country they're fighting for.

To this end this bank is co-operating with the people of our territory in every way possible. That is our duty, as we understand it.

ORLAND STATE BANK

Telephone: Orland Park 61

Banking Hours—9:00 to 3:00

DAYBREAK... heavy guns moving into position for action on the African Front... planes returning from a night "bombing party" over Axis territory. And, on the home front, loaded munition trains whistling shrill warnings as they approach slumber-wrapped towns in Kansas, Massachusetts, Texas—everywhere. It is WAR—war with its toil and tears, its heroism and sacrifices.

BUT SOME DAY WILL COME ANOTHER DAWN—a sunrise that will light up a world at peace. Then trains will speed across the nation carrying ration-free foods for America's pantries; materials for its home builders; tools and implements for its farms, factories and professions; and peace-time necessities for all!

Now we are engaged in war. America's railroads—all vital units in the transportation army—are performing a patriotic service. Theirs is the hauling job of the nation. And what a job they are doing—41,000,000 tons of army freight carried in '42—11,600,000 troops transported during the first year of the war!

ROCK ISLAND'S Program of Planned Progress, begun seven years ago, is being carried on even in the midst of the war. For when the new day dawns America will demand the best in rail transportation. While today it isn't possible to buy all of the equipment and materials required, we must have the revenue now for the great backlog of purchases that some day will be released. And think of the many jobs this will make available for our boys now in uniform!

As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

Dear Friends:- Just a few lines to say hello and hope you all feel as well as I do. It sure seemed good to hear from you again. How is good old Mokena? I suppose the same as ever only a little quieter since most of the boys have left. I have been quit busy, haven't much time for anything lately. Well folks, I don't have much news, so will close for now 'til I hear from you all again. Thanks for the nice Easter card. Your friend, Dave.

And now we have one from Pfc. Robert Frisch who is stationed at Camp Gordon Johnston, in Fla.: Dear Ladies:- I received your Easter greeting card and thanks a million. The weather down here in Fla., is sure turning hot. The other day the paper had in it that the temperature was ninety degrees. The old sand gets plenty warm on the feet to. The hot weather seems to be bringing out the snakes as we see many of them lately.

A couple Sundays ago some fellows went fishing and came back with a small alligator. We keep him tied up around our barracks.

Before closing I again wish to thank you for the Easter greeting. Sincerely Bob.

In Path of Allied Advance in Tunisia

General Rommel has experienced one reverse after another in Tunisia, not only at the hands of the American Second army corps, but also at the hands of the British First and Eighth armies. Each Allied advance has, of course, its sad aftermath. Shown is a regimental aid post where wounded British Yorkshiresmen and Italians are being treated after a day of intense activity on enemy troop concentrations and gun positions.

Ground Forces

Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commander of ground forces of the U. S. army, who was wounded by shell fragments while in Tunisia, is shown at top. Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second army, who has taken temporary command of the ground forces, is shown below.

Kiska, Jap Threat to Alaska and United States

This map shows you what the busy Japs have accomplished on the Aleutian island of Kiska since they occupied it last June. Despite repeated bombings by our air forces, the Nips have succeeded in installing formidable military establishments on the island with a view to future operations against Dutch Harbor, our naval base in the Alaskan area, and against Alaska itself. Proximity of the major enemy base at Paramushiro makes it possible for Kiska to be reinforced with comparative ease.

Woof! Woof! Mamma Is Off to the Wars

With good-by woofs and heart-breaking glances, six puppies of Trixie, Anton Grabowski's German shepherd dog, send her away to the army's dog-for-victory service. The pups don't know its meaning, but are excited about the service flag on Grabowski's home.

Saved From Japs

Lieut. Melvin Kimball (left) lights cigarette for his rescuer, Lieut. Ira Sussky, beside the plane in which Sussky landed and picked up Kimball behind Jap lines in Burma. Sussky, whose landing was covered by other U. S. planes, made nine attempts to take off before getting into the air, while Jap snipers were shooting at him.

One-Man Minesweeper

Pvt. James L. Kalman, of Philadelphia, is getting in some practice in the use of a mine detector during a demonstration by U. S. army combat engineers in North Africa. This gadget indicates the presence of buried mines.

Captured Enemy Weapons Compared at Aberdeen, Md.

The foreign material branch of the ordnance department of the U. S. army has in its possession many enemy weapons that they have brought to this country for comparison purposes with our own weapons. At right Lieut. Edwin Davis holds a shell at the breech of the "mystery" 88-mm. anti-aircraft and anti-tank gun that was talked about so much in the beginning of the war in Africa. Right: Colonel Jarrett holds a mortar shell for the German 81-mm. mortar, which almost compares with the American mortar in design.

John L. Lewis Addresses Mine Workers

President John L. Lewis is shown as he addressed the international policy committee of the United Mine Workers, in New York, who met to discuss the serious situation affecting over 450,000 workers in soft coal. Display Captured Japanese War Flags

Strangest Army Air Force Field

Shang-Ri-La field, perhaps strangest army air force field in the nation, has been opened at Glendale, Calif. Duplicating field conditions in remote operating areas, the odd field offers practical knowledge of how planes and engines may be changed and serviced under actual combat conditions. Dispersal of ships and camouflaging of aircraft is practical.

Marine Ace Reports Good News

Capt. Joe Foss of the marine corps, who scored sensational air victories while serving on Guadalcanal, is shown reporting to his boss, Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the marine corps, in Washington. Foss, who hails from Sioux Falls, S. D., shot down 26 Jap planes to tie Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's World War I record. Photo shows General Holcomb and Captain Foss.

RAISING KANE—Surprise

By FRANK WEBB

Uncle Phil Says:

A MAN needs two kinds of brains. One to say witty, brilliant things and another kind to keep him from saying them in the wrong place.

Once the foresighted farmer planted his watermelons in the center of the cornfield, but with all those airplanes overhead—where now?

If the time doesn't suit you, suit yourself to it.

As a man thinks, so he is, therefore some people never are.

A woman is always perfectly sure she is right until it comes to backing up her opinion with money.

It is only the very rich who are emphatic about the futility of riches.

Some men are known by their deeds—others by their mortgages.

Animals Not Stuffed

Despite their appearance, many animals in museums are not stuffed, says Collier's. In the American Museum of Natural History in New York city, for example, all the mammals in the North American Hall, including bison, moose, elk and musk oxen, are mounted on hollow forms and are so light in weight that they can be lifted easily.

Hooked Fish

Fish suffer little if any pain when they are hooked, for there are very few nerves about the jaw which could cause the sensation of pain. Some trout have been known to be hooked two or three times in the same day—by anglers using the same type of bait.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste. Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!
